Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1500 on Thursday 30 Dec 2021

UK Outlook for Friday 14 Jan 2022 to Friday 28 Jan 2022:
Through the second half of January, a continuation of the rather changeable regime is expected with spells of wet and windy weather interspersed by drier, brighter periods. Temperatures are overall expected to remain slightly above average as a result of mild spells and shorter-lived colder periods. These shorter-lived colder periods may still allow for some snow but this will typically fall over hills in the north. Later in the month, there is a tentative sign of more settled spells developing, particularly across the south which would increase the chance of overnight frost and fog here.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.